

A True Life Adventure Memoir for Those Interested in Alaska

In the summer of 2019, I embarked on a 10-day backpacking trip in the Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve with a group of friends. We were all experienced backpackers, but this was our first time in Alaska. We were excited to explore the vast wilderness and see the majestic mountains, glaciers, and wildlife that the park is famous for.

We flew into Anchorage and rented a car to drive to the park entrance. The drive was long, but it was worth it. The scenery was stunning, and we saw our first glimpse of the Wrangell Mountains. We arrived at the park entrance late in the afternoon and set up camp at a campground near the trailhead. We were eager to start our hike the next morning.

On our first day of hiking, we followed the trail along the East Fork of the Toklat River. The trail was well-maintained and easy to follow. We hiked through a forest of spruce and aspen trees, and we saw several moose and caribou along the way. We stopped for lunch at a beautiful waterfall, and we took some time to explore the area. We continued hiking in the afternoon, and we reached our campsite at dusk. We were tired, but we were also excited to be in the wilderness.

The next day, we hiked up a steep mountain pass. The climb was challenging, but the views from the top were worth it. We could see the Wrangell Mountains in all their glory, and we could even see the summit of Mount Wrangell, the highest peak in the park. We took a break at the top of the pass to enjoy the views and to have lunch. We continued hiking in the afternoon, and we reached our campsite at a beautiful alpine lake. We spent the rest of the day relaxing by the lake and enjoying the scenery.

We spent the next few days exploring the park. We hiked to a glacier, we saw a grizzly bear, and we even climbed a mountain. The weather was perfect, and the scenery was breathtaking. We were having the time of our lives.

On our last day of hiking, we hiked back to the trailhead. We were sad to leave the park, but we were also grateful for the amazing experience we had. We had seen some of the most beautiful scenery in the world, and we had made memories that we will never forget.

If you are interested in Alaska, I highly recommend visiting the Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve. It is a truly amazing place, and it is a place that you will never forget.

Here are some tips for planning a backpacking trip in Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve:

- Plan your trip in advance. The park is vast, and there are many different trails to choose from. It is important to do your research and choose a trail that is appropriate for your fitness level and experience.
- Bring the right gear. The weather in Alaska can change quickly, so it is important to be prepared for all types of conditions. You will need to bring warm clothes, rain gear, and sturdy hiking boots.
- Be aware of the wildlife. Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve is home to a variety of wildlife, including bears, wolves, and moose. It is important to be aware of your surroundings and to take precautions to avoid encounters with wildlife.
- Leave no trace. The park is a pristine wilderness, and it is important to leave it as you found it. Pack out all of your trash, and do not disturb the wildlife or vegetation.

I hope this article has inspired you to plan a backpacking trip to Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve. It is a truly amazing place, and it is a place that you will never forget.
