Whether you're planning a short weekend getaway or a long-term adventure, there are plenty of resources available to help you plan your trip. But one of the best ways to learn about travelling and living on the road in New Zealand is to hear from those who have already done it.

Here are a few stories and advice from Kiwis who have travelled and lived on the road:

"Just do it!"

"I had always dreamed of travelling and living on the road, but I was always too scared to take the plunge. I finally decided to just do it, and it was the best decision I ever made." - Sarah, 25

Sarah sold her car and all of her belongings, and bought a campervan. She has been living on the road for the past two years, and she has no plans of stopping anytime soon.

"I love the freedom of being able to wake up and go wherever I want, whenever I want. I've seen so much of New Zealand, and I've met so many amazing people. It's the best way to travel." - Sarah

"Don't be afraid to ask for help"

"I was travelling on my own, and I got stuck in a snowstorm. I didn't know what to do, so I stopped at a farmhouse and asked for help. The farmer and his wife were so kind, and they let me stay with them for the night." - Mark, 30

Mark says that he has met many kind and helpful people on his travels. He advises other travellers to not be afraid to ask for help if they need it.

"There are always people willing to help, so don't be afraid to ask. You might be surprised at how willing people are to lend a helping hand." - Mark

"Be prepared for anything"

"I was driving through the mountains when my car broke down. I was stranded for hours, and I didn't know what to do. I finally managed to get a tow truck, but it took me a whole day to get back to civilisation." - Anna, 28

Anna says that she has learned that it's important to be prepared for anything when you're travelling on the road. She advises other travellers to always carry a spare tyre, a first-aid kit, and some food and water.

"You never know when you might need them, so it's always better to be safe than sorry." - Anna

"Embrace the journey"

"Travelling and living on the road is an amazing experience, but it's not always easy. There will be times when you're tired, frustrated, and homesick. But it's important to remember that the journey is part of the adventure." - James, 32

James has been travelling and living on the road for the past five years. He says that the journey has been filled with both highs and lows, but he wouldn't trade it for anything.

"The journey is part of the adventure. Embrace it, and you'll have an experience that you'll never forget." - James

Advice for Kiwis travelling and living on the road

* Do your research. Before you hit the road, it's important to do your research and plan your trip. This includes choosing the right vehicle, finding places to stay, and budgeting for your expenses. * Be flexible. Things don't always go according to plan when you're travelling on the road. Be prepared to change your plans if necessary, and don't be afraid to ask for help. * Be prepared for the unexpected. No matter how well you plan your trip, there will always be unexpected events. Be prepared for anything, and don't let the unexpected setbacks ruin your adventure. * Embrace the journey. Travelling and living on the road is an amazing experience, but it's not always easy. Embrace the journey, and you'll have an experience that you'll never forget.

If you're thinking about travelling and living on the road in New Zealand, I encourage you to do it. It's an experience that will change your life. Just be sure to do your research, be flexible, and be prepared for the unexpected.

And remember, the journey is part of the adventure.
